List of North Korean websites banned in South Korea

As of 2010, there are 65 North Korean-run and pro-North Korean websites blocked in South Korea,[1] a country that practices substantial Internet censorship of diverse content.[2] A test conducted by OpenNet Initiative in 2010 found that most websites blocked in South Korea are related to North Korea. The number of blocked North Korean sites has increased in recent years.[2]

Blocking is based on the National Security Act, and coordinated by the Korea Communications Standards Commission, which also engages in Internet surveillance.[3] The commission is nominally independent but mainly appointed by the government.[4] The blocks are implemented by Internet service providers (ISPs).[5] South Korean law imposes punishments up to seven years of imprisonment for attempting to access blocked sites.[1] According to Reporters Without Borders, blocking of North Korean websites is not viewed favorably by South Korean Internet users and some know how to circumvent it.[3] Internet Archive's Wayback Machine and web caches of search engines are not blocked and include copies of North Korean websites.[6]

In 2005, up to 3,167 webpages unrelated to North Korea were found to be blocked due to blocking IPs at the router level.[5] DNS tampering that prevents domain names to be resolved into correct IPs is also used.[7]

In addition to entire websites, it is possible to block accounts on social media,[1] and some 13 accounts have been blocked on Facebook, YouTube and Twitter,[3][8] including Uriminzokkiri's Twitter account.[1] Twitter, however, has proven impractical to censor because retweets of North Korean tweets by other users are not blocked.[9] Furthermore, any links to North Korean websites in the tweets are already blocked.[10] Individual contents of websites hosted in South Korea may also be deleted.[3] In 2010, South Korean website administrators were forced to delete 80,499 pro-North Korea messages.[11]

Blocking has increased from previous years.[2] According to Reporters Without Borders, blocking sharply intensified during Lee Myung-bak's presidency.[3] In OpenNet Initiative's 2006 test, the overwhelming majority of tested North Korean websites were blocked.[12] In 2007 and 2008, a significant number of tested North Korean sites remained blocked and blocking was consistent among Internet service providers.[7]

S. Korean Regime Denounced for Trying to Fabricate "Human Rights Resolution" against DPRK

Pyongyang, March 26 (KCNA) -- At a session of the UN Human Rights Council (UNHRC) the south Korean puppet regime made desperate efforts to fabricate an anti-DPRK "human rights resolution".

DPRK's papers on Tuesday in bylined commentaries term it another grave challenge to the sovereignty, sacred social system and dignity of the supreme leadership of the DPRK.

Rodong Sinmun says:

At the session a few days ago the south Korean puppets got frenzy to create an atmosphere for cooking up a "resolution" against the DPRK, crying out for "punishing it by indicting it at the International Criminal Court" and "forming a commission of inquiry". They went the lengths of egging human scum on to give evidence to fan up the fabrication of "human rights resolution" against the DPRK. What touches off towering resentment is that they dared hurt the dignity of the supreme leadership of the DPRK, calling for "inquiry" and the like.

The south Korean puppets ran amuck more than once to do harm to the DPRK, proposing a sinister "human rights resolution" jointly with the anti-DPRK hostile forces under the manipulation of the U.S. at UN sessions.

But this is the first time that they went on the rampage to set up even a UN body for hurting the DPRK.

Korea News Service in Japan carries articles of the Korean Central News Agency (KCNA) and is blocked in South Korea.
